Nautical Notices.

An Account of the Effect of Thirty Tons of Quicksilver escaping by the rolling of leathern Bags into the Bilge Water, on board the Triumph Man of War: communicated by Dr. BAIRD, Physician General to the Navy, to a friend in London.

IN April, 1810, the Triumph man of war took on board thirty tons of quicksilver, contained in leathern bags of 50lbs each. These bags were picked up on the shore of Cadiz, from the wreck of two Spanish line of battle ships, lost in the storm immediately preceding, at the end of March, the above date. The collected bags were stowed below, in the bread room, after hold, and store rooms: they were saturated with salt water, and, in about a fortnight, all decayed and burst. In the act of collecting and endeavouring to save the quicksilver in casks, much of it found its way to the recesses of the ship, beyond the possibility of recovery. Some portion, however, was secreted by the men, who amused themselves in various ways with it, as cleaning their spoons, &c.

At this period bilge water had collected in the ship, the stench from which was intolerable; and the carpenter's mate, in the act of sounding the well, was nearly suffocated. The effect of the gas escaping from bilge water is manifested, by its changing every metallic substance in the ship black. But in this instance metals of every kind were coated with quicksilver; and a general affection of the mouth took place among the men and officers, to a severe degree of ptyalism, in upwards of 200 men. The ship was sent to Gibraltar, had all her stores taken out, the hold made clean, and all the quicksilver, that could be reached, removed: but near ten tons are supposed still to remain between the ship's timbers below, which can only be cleared away by docking the ship, and dislodging a plank at the most descending part near the keel. Since the process of cleaning the ship has taken place, and a new atmosphere created, all effects from the quicksilver have ceased.

The following is an extract of a letter from Captain Carns, of the ship Neptune, to the Secretary of the Marine Board, describing the Reef discovered between New Holland and New Guinea.

"Thinking it a duty I owe for the benefit of Navigators, I beg leave to acquaint you of the discovery I made between New Holland and New Guinea. On the 20th day of June last, I took a good departure from Sandy Cape, New Holland, and steered a course to keep in midway, between the Great Barrier and Wreck Reefs. On the following day at noon, saw Sandbanks and small Rocks ahead, stretching as far to the Eastward as we could see from the mast head, and about five miles to the Westward, I immediately wore and run down to the Western extremity, and passed it within two miles; Longitude by good Timekeepers 154. 20' East, and Latitude 21. 58' South, and as the Western End of Wreck Reef is laid down in 155. 28' East, I concluded it must be a new discovery, and called it Midway Reef; as it renders the navigation between the Great Barrier and Wreck Reefs, very critical. I submit it to your consideration to give it such publicity as you may deem necessary. I have, &c. R. CARNS."

In the Calcutta papers of last week we observed mentioned no less than the departure, of fifteen sail of Arab Ships for the Gulf and Red Sea.

His Majesty's Ship Conway, arrived at Muscat, on the 26th January after a passage of 11 days from Bombay.

The arrival of the Jemima, is still protracted and if we did not know that she had been spoken with after the Gale of wind in which the Phoenix suffered so much, we should entertain some doubts about her safety.

The Free Traders that may be now shortly expected, are the Iris, Blenden Hall, Lord Cochrane, Sheffield Elizabeth, and Lady Boringdon.

The Traveller will be the first ship for London and will sail, the first week in March.

HORÆ FALCONERIA.

CONTINENT, Dr. Burney says, for it is not mentioned by Falconer, we may count four continents, of which there are but two well known, the first called the ancient continent, comprehends Europe, Asia; & Africa; the second is the new continent called America, the third, which is called the northern or artic continent, comprehends Greenland, Spitzburgh, Nova Zembla, and the lands of Jesso; and the fourth comprehends New Guinea, New Zealand, New Holland & several others, hitherto little known. From whence Dr. Burney, has gleaned this we cannot conjecture, suffice to say that it is incorrect, and that the merest smatterer in Geography knows better than to call groups of Islands continents.

CORDAGE, under this head Burney, has given a concise account of all the modes of making the common and all the different kinds of patent cordage and has judiciously introduced Sir. Samuel Standidges, opinion concerning the best kind of rigging, which we give at full length.

Sir Samuel Standidge observes, in an answer written by him to a letter of Lord Barhams that as it is still a doubt whether cable or shroud laid cordage is the best for standing-rigging, and what is the most efficacious mode of preserving it from the weather without injuring the materials. During his long practice in the use of cordage, he says, that he has often examined and taken particular notice of the wear of standing-rigging, and has used hawser-laid, and four strand shroud-laid, as also three strand shroud-laid rope for standing-rigging. He has found the cable-laid rope so full of cavities that it admitted of a great deal of water, which has frequently occasioned a decay; and he is of opinion that it has not the strength of the three strand rope, owing to its having so many small strands twisted into a hawser.

Digitized with financial assistance from the Government of Maharashtra on 28 June, 2017

As to the four strand shroud-laid rope for standing-rigging, it has, generally, one eighth part of the weight and substance in the middle of the rope, called a broke in order to make it round, which either by stretching or want of air, or of being made of inferior hemp, when the four strand rope is opened he has always found it to be rotten, and to have decayed, in some measure, the four strands.

The three strand shroud-laid rope, well tarred with Swedish or Stockholm tar, and laid short, so as the tar will sprout out to fill up the secret cavities, and, after stretched, when in use, to keep the cavities filled with Stockholm tar, is the best means of keeping out the weather and not injuring the materials.

He has had sets of standing-rigging, he observes (after off examining, once fresh parcelling, and serving round the mast-heads and foot-hook staves, and fresh seizing in the dead-eyes), of three strand shroud-laid rope in constant use fourteen years; and, in his opinion, the three strand shroud-laid rope is the strongest and best for standing-rigging.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The Observer, in reply to Urorius desires the Editor to state that the note to correspondents in the Gazette, of the 20th of January, was meant as intimation to him. The Stroller never came to hand.

WEDNESDAY, 24th FEBRUARY, 1819.

The present crisis is perhaps one of the most interesting, that ever happened and the congress about to meet at Aix-la-Chapelle will have ample work on their hands; besides the question of the evacuation of France by the allies, the independance, or slavery of South America, awaits their fiat, and we trust though rumour limits their deliberations to three weeks that those momentous questions will not be so hastily decided on. The time is also fast approaching for the meeting of our Parliament; a period allways fraught with interest and now particularly so. Amongst many other important objects that we wish to see discussed, is one of great and peculiar interest, we mean that of colonization in the East Indias, if the evils of this are great, we believe, that these resulting from the interdiction will be still greater. Already are we told in the Bengal papers that a large and independent population are arising, and this is evident enough to any person of common observation, and is an evil that will increase in spite of all obstacles, and we are convinced can only be counteracted, by permitting colonization and encouraging our superfluous population to emigrate to the East Indias, rather than to America.

It is true, this is against the opinion of the Marquis Cornwallis, but since that time, circumstances have so materialy altered, that the opinions of 1794, ought to have but little weight in the year 1819.

It is said that the Indian Colonies would follow the example of their American brethern, this we admit; for it is the direct order of nature; and has been the course of all Colonies, from the earliest time.

We could enlarge a great deal on this subject but hope to see it more fully discussed by some abler pen.

The situation of Buonaparté, has also occupied much of the public attention and marks of indignation occasionally burst forth, but the charge is of so novel a nature against a British officer, and so abhorent to English feeling, that we are in hopes it will be refuted.

Letters from Kaira, mention that the Ice has been as thick as a crown piece, for many successive mornings. The Latitude of Kaira does not much exced 22-30.

In our last paper in the account of the Bombay races the winning Horse Spartan, was said to have belonged to Capt. Sheriff, But Capt. Sheriff, has himself desired us to say that the horse is the property of Lieut. W. D. Robertson.

The Poona races being about to commence our correspondent at that place has kindly intimated, the projected festivities that are to take place during the races.

On the 1st of March a General Pic Nic, on the Race course.
3 The Commissioners Ball and Supper.
5 The Turf club, Ball and Supper,
9 Breakfast and Pic Nic for the Ladies in the Government Gardens.
10 Race Ball and Supper.
12 The Commissioners Masked Ball and Supper.

Though anticipation often ends in disappointment, yet we predict from the well known spirit and taste of the society of Poona that nothing of this kind will be here met with.

It is said that Appa Saib, has been seen near Asseerghur and that it is intention, to throw himself into it. The siege of this place, by the force under Colonel Doveton, will however commence immediately.

Accounts have been received from Malwan, of the fall of Rairee, but no particulars have yet reached us.

It appears to have been taken by assault by the force under Sir William Grant Keir, who speaks most handsomely of the officers and troops, under his command, our loss has been trifling, but we understand two officers of the 89th Regiment have been severely wounded; this we trust will put an end to the tumults in that quarter. We may now consider the whole line of Coast from Cape Comorin to Jigat as either in our posession; or under our control.

Captain Loch in H. M. Ship Eden off the Island, of Kishmee & Angaum on the 10th & 11th January fell in with eight sail of Joasmee Vessels two of which were destroyed and a third so much damaged as to make it impossible for her to reach any of the piratical ports, having several grape and one 32 pounder shot through his hull. The two vessels destroyed were Bugalahs of considerable force; and the other six were Trankeys, who must have suffered very severely from the fire of the Eden.

A person of the name of William Duane, formerly an Editor of a paper in Bengal, is now making a conspicous figure in America, a la mode de Cobbet.

Mr. S. Salter to be Collector of Purneah.
Mr. Archibald Campbell Ditto of Banda.
Mr. E. R. Barwell Ditto of Midnapore.
Mr. Thomas Brown Ditto of Government Customs at Bareily.
Mr. David Scott, jun. to be collector of Mymensing.

We have been informed that the statement contained in note the first, to the correspondence at St. Helena which appeared in our paper last week, is incorrect. The officer of the Cambridge therein alluded to, is at present in Calcutta, and states that he did not deliver the pictures of young Napoleon to Sir Hudson Lowe, but to another person; and that he firmly believe the Governor did not know of their being on the island. We are obliged for this information, since the aim of all our researches is the truth; but we do not conceive that this circumstance invalidates the veracity of the note; the pictures might very soon have come into the hands of Sir Hudson Lowe, after leaving those of the officer, and have been with-held as stated; and Count Bertrand, to whom the note is to be attributed, was likely to be well informed on the subject,

Letters from Purneah, dated the 21th ultimo. state, that the weather has been remarkably cold in that neighbourhood; and that for several mornings the ground was covered with a hoar-frost. It is said that at Juanpore on the 17th ult. the thermometer stood at 33 about 20 minutes after sun-rise: and that at noon it rose, in the house, to 58. We are concerned to learn that this unusual degree of cold has produced considerable mischief in the vegetable kingdom; and that the Indigo sown last year, in several districts, has suffered materially. A letter just received from Sheergatty on the road to Benares, mentions the ruin of all the crops in that district. On the 17th 18th and 19th, the Thermometer was at 28 a little before day break, and ice a quarter of an inch thick was found on every pool. At the date of the letter water exposed by night in earthern vessels, was found sufficiently frozen in the morning to supply ice for the table. The Ryots in the neighbourhood calculate on the loss of one-fourth of their crops! The temperature in the vicinity of Calcutta has become much warmer during the last two or three days; and the weather-wise, seem to expect rain. Such a change is particularly desirable, for vegetation is much in want of refreshment,

It is said that BAHAWA KHAN of Bahawulpore has warmly espoused the cause of SHAH SHOOJAH, who is proceeding to Kabul, He was opposed by the troops of his nephew Prince KAMRAN, near Dira Ghauree, but they were soon routed, Our accounts from RUNJEET SINGH'S Court, state, that the Affghans had recovered from their panic, and had pursued the retreating Seikhs with fury and success. An action was shortly expected with the adherents of APPA SAHIB.

European Extracts.

On Tuesday, the 8th inst. the Hyacinth, 26, Captain Alexander Renton Sharpe, C. B. arrived at Portsmouth from the South American station, where she had been employed two years and a half, to be paid off. She left Buenos Ayres on the 14th of June; touched at Monte Video; & finally sailed from Rio Janeiro on the 21st of July—Though there had been no meeting between the contending forces in South America, since the battle of Maipo, yet the general state of affairs there is considered highly favourable to the cause of independence. It will be remembered, that that battle was to decide the Possession of the whole province of Chili; and that the Royalist force was totally beaten and disorganised. The scattered few that escaped the bayonet, threw themselves into Tulcuquana, (the port of Conception) as being impregnable, on the land side, and which post could alwyas be maintained as a rallying point, so long as Old Spain could keep up the superiority at Sea. The independents, however, have since gradually increased their naval force, so that they now have a decided superiority in this arm of their strength; and soon the post of Tulcuquana, the last hold of Ferdinand in Chili, must fall into the hands of the Independent forces. The battle of Maipo is described as not more important in having arrested the Province of Chili out of the hands of its old despotic masters, than in its effects upon those hands who are so determinedly struggling to assert their independence; it gave such a nerve and elasticity to the cause, as appears to have despirited their opponents, and impressed them with a belief that a spirit of independence is unconquerable.—With respect to the state of affairs in Peru, the Buenos Ayrean army had advanced towards it, as far as Salta, and the Royalist army was within a short distance to the northward, at Jujuy. A revolt was dayly expected to take place at Lima which, it was presumed, would occasion the recal of the Royalist army and; then, it was anticipated, the Buenos Ayreans, aided by the Chili patriots, would be enabled to advance, unopposed, to Potosi—The Portuguese troops, whose object appears to be to extend the Brazilian boundaries, to what may be called their natural limits (the river Parana), had shewn no disposition whatever to give up any part of the country they had occupied; they affect to say, that if Ferdinand will send a sufficient body of troops to keep down the independent forces, they will then retire. However, two days before the Hyacinth left the river Plate, 2,000 Portuguese troops under General Pinto, had passed up that river, to land at Rio Negro, to act in furtherance of the object of making the river Parana, the western or internal boundary of the Brazillian territory in South America.—The Spanish and native inhabitants are decidedly adverse to this invasion, and it can only be said, that the Portuguese have Military possession of the country--on which their army encamp.—The Spanish frigate Esmeralda, which struck her colours to the independent frigate Lautarro, (late Wyndham Indiaman,) and afterwards got away, was not secured to her captors, owing to the imprudence of the first Lieut. of the independent frigate.—She completed her number of men and got her guns on board, on the day before the action.—Seeing her opponent (which she went out purposely to fight,) she commenced the action by firing a broadside into the Esmeralda, which the latter returned; but only three guns took effect. The Independent then ran close alongside, and Captain O'Brien and about 25 men boarded her—the Spaniards all running below. The 1st Lieutenant of the Independent, instead of well securing the prize, by putting more men on board, dropped off, to capture the brig Paznella, the consort of the Esmeralda.—The brig hereupon struck her colours; but, in the mean time, the Spaniards in the Esmeralda had gained fresh courage by the absence of the Independent frigate, and after a hard struggle, in which Captain O'Brien and most of the boarders were killed, they

FROM A POEM ENTITLED THE BATTLE OF ALGIERS.

British Seamen.

Oh Christ! 'Tis strange to think upon,
And sad to tell, and wild to see,
The toils of fight, of storm and sun,
The Seamen grapple smit ugly—
Round the chill Pole doomed scarce to breathe;
Or scathed the burning Line beneath;
Thro' many a midnight charged to keep;
Dread watch along the desolate deep;
To ocean's slow-wasting prey perhaps,
Or gulphed within the roaring lapse
Of the mountainous o'er-bursting waves—
Far from their homes—their fathers' graves,—
Far from some wife left all forlorn
To wait and weep her tar's return—
There comes the battle's thundering rout;
Where bleeding limbs are blown about,
And, 'mid death-clouds, and floods of gore,
Life strains for one last volley more—
All this, and worse, the reckless race
Can lightly dare to guard and grace.
The land for which they love to die,
So that death seal her victory—
Aye; duty to their own home-isle
Even in the cannon's mouth can smile,
And grappling death as some thing dear,
Hail chain-shot with a gay "What cheer?"

regained possession of the frigate. The Independent, upon this unfortunate issue, retired to Valparaso; as did the Spaniards to Tulcuquana.—The Independent squadron has been since joined by several other armed ships; among them is the Cumberland, carrying 64 guns and 400 men, formerly an East Indiaman. The Lantarro mounts 52 guns and has a crew o 350 men, 30 of whom are said to be Englishmen.—Captain G———, of the British navy (brother of a Baronet), had lately arrived at Buenos Ayres in a brig of war, mounting 24 18-pounders—formerly his Majesty's, brig Hecate. Captain G———, two Lieutenants, and several passed Midshipmen, formed part of her establishment.—She was intended to be sold to the Independent Government; but the terms not being agreed to she was proceeding to Sea, under British colours, when Commodore Bowles, sent the Tyne and Icarus after her, and brought her into port, for a breach of the navigation laws. Had she been under the Patriot colours, & provided with a commission from either of the chiefs, she would have been identified with the Belligerent cause, and of course, no interruption would have been offered to any of her proceedings, wherein the British flag or name was not concerned. The Andromache, Captain Shereff, and Blossom, Captain Hickey, were in the Pacific Ocean, attending to the British Interests in that quarter: they arrived at Valparaiso, in 42 days from Rio: they were lying at Valparaiso so late as the 12th of May. The Amphion, Commodore Bowles, Icarus, Hon. Captain Bridgman, were in the river Plate. The Tyne, Captain Falcon, was left at Rio: she was to sail soon for the Pacific, to relieve the Blossom. The Portuguese Governments have cause to regret, having laid a duty upon the importation of merchandize from Europe into Rio: in the quarter previous thereto, to the produce of the revenue was 60,000 dollars; in the next it was 16,000; and in the last, 6,000; the goods are now smuggled into the place. The Hyacinth brought diamonds to the value of £.60,000.—She has sailed to Deptford, to be paid off.

DISTINGUISHED PERSONS IN INDIA.

A morning papers appears to be under some mistakes in its account of General Munro, of whom such honourable mention is made in the India Gazette. We believe this officer to be Thomas Munro, whose character and talents well deserve being brought before the public in rather a more marked manner than usual. He is a person of great powers of mind, and practical skill in the difficult art of administering the Government of large provinces in times of confusion and danger. After attracting the notice of Government during Lord Cornwallis's Mysore war, he was appointted by that nobleman to be one of the assistants to Colonel Read in setting and governing the provinces conquerred from Tippoo. In 1799, he was selected by Lord Wellesley (who was a personal stranger) to administer the government of Kanara, where the province of Malabar was afterwards annexed: after rendering important service in this situation, he was appointed by Lord Wellesly to a similar office in the extensive and valuable provinces ceded by the Nizam in 1801, in commutation of his subsidy; and his conduct in that situation not only attracted general applause but was equally beneficial to the inhabitants and to the Company. A few years ago he returned to England, and, on the renewal of the Company's charter was for many days successively examined for several hours before the House of Commons when his evidence excited the surprise, and even admiration, of all parties in the House. He then was sent to Madras (to which establishment he belongs) by the Court of Directors, on an important duty, connected with the permanent settlement of the revenues of that Presidency; and we now find him actively employed as a soldier, with his usual success and with general satisfaction.

Perhaps a few words relative to some of the other persons who have lately distinguished themselves in India may not be unacceptable to our readers.

Sir John Malcolm's services and writings are already familiar to the public.

Mr. Elphinstone, author of the History of Kabul, and Resident at Poona, is brother of Lord Elphinstone, and nephew of Lord Keith, and Mr. Elphinstone the Director. He is a civil servant of the Bengal establisment, and we believe, was a short time at the College of Calcutta. He was afterwards appointed by Lord Wellesley to be Secretary to the Resident at Poonah; and he attended the Duke of Wellington as Interpreter and civil Secretary during his campaigns against the Mahrattas, being present at every battle, and mentioned with honour on every occasion by the Duke. At the place he was appointed Resident at Nagpore with the Rajah of Berar, whence, on the resignation of Sir Barry Close, he was removed to Poona.

Major-General Sir David Ochterlony is an officer whose recent services are too well known to require notice here. The first great act which formed his reputation was his memorable defence of the city of Delhi, against the troops of Scindia, during Lord Wellesly's Mahratta war: on this occation, the protection of the great Mogul Shah Alum, was intrusted to him, and was of the utmost importance at that crisis of the war It is needless to state, that General Ochterlony fulfilled every duty confided to him with signal success, and that his subsquent progress has confirmed every expectation of which his earlier achievements held out the promise.

Mr. Jenkins, the Resident at Nagpore, is celebrated for being perhaps the most distinguished Student of the College at Calcutta, where he acquired various honours, and eminent proficiency in two, we believe three of the Oriental languages. Having chosen the diplomatic line, Lord Wellesley nominated him to be Secretary to the Resident with Scindia, in which situation he was exposed to great personal danger from the violence of Scindia; his escort was attacked, his baggage plundered, and himself imprisoned; here his firmness and courage were as signal as his academical attainments: and he was finally rewarded, after a due course of honorable service, by being appointed to succeed to the Residency at Nagpore. It will be observe that Mr. Jenkins, as well as Mr. Elphinstone, have uniformly been foremost in every action with the enemy, and are noticed in every despatch for their "gallant example to the troops."

PHILADELPHIA.

From the exposition we have had at various times, of the character, conduct, and acts of Duane, and of the ostensible object and design in forming an alliance with the federal party, no democrat professing himself as such, can in any manner unite with Duane and the federal party, and be instrumental in pulling down JAMES MONROE from the presidency, to elevate De Witt, Clinton, and Michael Leib, as secretary of State, and William Duane as Secretary at War ! ! ! ! ! ! !

Democrats! Corruption and intrigue surround you. Unite your forces and success will always attend a union of honest men. Iset me intreat you to review the premises throughout, and I am sure you will see the "throes of a faction," Duane, Leib & Co. "in the agonies of dissolution."

Let division cease; give [illegible]ancy to principle; and, inasmuch as you think for yourselves, and do not pin your political faith to the coat sleeve of any man. draw your inferences from facts, and I am sure you will be of one mind and opinion.
